"It was about 4 o'clock when I started.

I wanted to get away as soon as I could on account of the rain; so I started with the balloon about two thirds full, and therefore could take no ballast. Before I got over the lake, and while inside the city, I threw out a heavy winter cloak, after which I rose higher, but still continued to go northward. When over the pier I threw out a coil of anchor rope weighing three pounds, hoping that I would rise still higher, and get away from the lake. After throwing out the rope I passed from the rain-storm into a snow-storm. I was then about two miles up, and the snow fell so thick and fast that I could not see beneath me. This lasted but a few minutes. then about two miles up, and the snow left so thick and fast that I could not see beneath me. This lasted but a few minutes. The snow melted on the balloon and the cordage scaked full of water, making the balloon heavy, and it settled. I put out the red flag for help, fastened on my life-preserver, opened the valve, and resigned arready to fate. I saw the steam-fug folmyself to fate. I saw the steam-tug fol-owing me, and I was so far away from it that it looked like a little speck upon the water. I was several miles from shore, and was so far up the lake that I could barely distinguish the city. In a few minutes I struck the water. The balloon, from which very little gas had escaped, turned partially over on its side; the basket was completely on its side, and my weight kept it under water. When I struck I plunged in nearly to my shoulders; the sudden chill nearly strangled me. I knew my only hope was in keeping in the basket.

"At this time the basket was on its side;

I was on my knees in the basket with both hands over my head, hanging on to the ring from which the basket is suspended. The balloon dragged through the water at a fearful rate, answering for a sail. After dragging through the water in this manner for about half an hour I looked back over for about half an hour I looked back over my shoulder and saw the steam from the tug like a faint speck in the distance. Af-ter dragging about an hour longer I heard their whistle, and indeed it was a joyful sound. In a few minutes I could hear the puffing of the engine. I saw themen waving their hats. I reached one arm up out of the water and waved it at them, and in a few minutes they came alongside. I shouted to them to see that the gas in the balloon did not eatch on fire. They then seized hold of the cordage and lifted the balloon on deck. I was so chilled that I could hardly speak. They slit the bailoon from the top to the bottom, and it immedithe deck. The captain and some ladies as-sisted me to the cabin, and the ladies took good care of me and dried my clothes. The captain told me that he saw the balloon descend, and that he could see the top of it on the water all the while. He said that I had floated about an hour and a half when he picked me up, and I was then sev-enteen miles from Oswego and seven miles from shore."

An Interesting Decision. A FOREIGN-BORN YOUTH NATURALIZED BY HIS MOTHER'S MARRIAGE TO A CITIZEN.

CHICAGO, July 9.-Mr. Justice Harlan, of the Supreme Court, made recently a decision of some interest to the children of foreign-born parents. John P. Kellar was indicted in the Federal Court at Springfield for having voted, when not entitled to vote, at an election for representative in Congress held in 1880, in the township of East Lincoln, Logan county. The facts of the case as they appeared on the trial were these: '
Kellar's parents were subjects of Prus sia, where his father died in 1865, at which time the son was only seven years of age. His mother came to the United States, bringing the boy with her, and in 1868 she married Michael Gaschka, who was a natu-ralized citizen of the United States. It was decided that the mother, upon her mar-riage with Gaschka, became ipso facto a citizen of the United States as fully as if she had been herself naturalized, and that the son being a minor, and dwelling in this country when his mother married, became naturalized citizen herself a citizen. The contention of the Government was that the son could not vote except by complying with section 2,167 of the Revised Statutes of the United States relating to naturalization the United States relating to naturalization. tion. This view was, however, overruled by the justice upon the ground that the section has no application to the ease of a resident foreign-born minor, who became a citizen by the force of his mother's mar-riage to a citizen. Kellar was, therefore, discharged honorably from imprisonment.

Vindicating a Great Poet's Memory London, July 9.—The Athenaum promises to publish some hitherto unpublished Byron papers, including a collection of poems by Lady Byron, written during her residence with her husband, some having his emendations, and also a correspondence between her and Lord Byron's sister du-ring her engagement and early married life and to the date of the poet's death; also documents referring to the destruction of the memoirs and other interesting papers. "This large body of correspondence," says the Athenaum, "will be found to demonstrate the baselessness of various statements made by Lady Byron in later years to her sister-in-law's discredit, and more especially of the hideous imagination to which Mrs. Beecher Stowe gave such wide and lamentable publicity thirteen years ago."

Repenting at Leisure in a Poorhouse. Newsured, July 9.—Many will remember about a year ago an account of the running away of Miss Ada Deyo, of the town of Gardiner, Ulster county, a white girl of respectable family, with a burly negro named John Wesley Sampson, to whom she had been secretly married. The event caused much excitement at the time. The girl's relatives were wealthy, and held a girl's relatives were wealthy, and held a high position in society, she being an adopted daughter of Mr. John H. Deyo, of Gardiner. The fact that the young lady was beautiful and accomplished made her conduct all the more astonishing to her friends and associates. The poor girl has bitterly experienced the folly of her act, and is now an inmate of the Sullivan-

Arctic and African Exploration.

London, July 9.—The Austrian meteorological expedition has made an unsuccessful attempt to reach Jan Mayen, and has put back to Tromsoe. Another effort will be made. If it again fails the party will go to Iceland. Mr. Stanley continues to explore the Congo. It is said that his report to the King of the Beigians will be so favorable that the Congo will be the chief conductor of trade into the centre of Africa. As a French station is established at the mouth of the Congo, and French suzerainty is acknowledged by the powerful chiefs of the neighborhood, a slight international difficulty may eventually arise.

In 1849 Mr. Thomas E. Garvin, while at Mount St. Mary's College, wrote a letter to his sister, Miss Lou Garvin, now Mrs. Dr. Casselberry, who was residing at Gettysburg, Pa. By some means the letter never was sent to its destination. Last week Maurice Garvin, of Evansville, Ind., while East, was handed the letter, which had been placed in the archives of the college. It had never been opened, and Maurice returned it to his father several days ago, upon his return to the city. Mr. Garvin was very much surprised. He well remembered the circumstances under which the letter was written.
